“The exhibitors at our show are people who you would not necessarily see at standard Wedding Shows, so come along and see something a little bit different”

There will be two fashion shows during the day at 12 and 2pm, starring Recession clothing by Gill Loats, 'Stand and Stare', who create small intimate pieces of theatre, will be performing 'Robomance', a love story between two wind up robots set to Dolly Parton and set in the back of a car in the car park!

Doors open at 11am with the event running until 4pm, and entrance is free.

Having hosted lots of weddings, the team at the Southville Centre noticed that the people choosing the venue were doing so because they liked the ethics, the relaxed atmosphere and the chance to customise their wedding to reflect their personal style. "If you want a cream tea and bunting

– we can do it, if you want a hog roast with a ceilidh we can do it, ploughmans and a DJ - no problem, formal three course meal and a classical quartet - of course!" said Dawn De Montfort, Centre Manager.
